MEDIA KIT

FAAM No. 35, Summer 2022

FirstAmericanArtMagazine.com/advertise

REACH THE DECISION-MAKERS!

Make an impact on the people who are most passionate about Native art—our readers. They include dedicated collectors, artists, art professionals, and tribal leaders. FAAM readers are mature, educated, sophisticated, successful, and influence others in the Native art world. They are the demographic you want to reach.

- Female/Male: 54%/46%
- Attended college: 100%
- Hold a master's degree: 37%
- Hold a doctoral degree: 29%
- 97% personally own Native art
- 87% plan to travel to a Native art event in the upcoming year

Old publication models don't work in today's Native art world. Collectors and how they collect Native art have changed dramatically in the last decade. To reach the new generation of collectors, you need a publication that uses print and electronic media to reflect the evolving realities of the Indigenous art scene.

ABOUT FAAM

- Print + digital magazine to reach the widest possible audience
- Exclusively focused on art by Indigenous peoples of the Americas
- An art journal sharing new research
- Intelligent yet accessible
- Cover stock: 80# cover with a soft-touch matte finish
- Frequency: quarterly

First American Art Magazine (FAAM) provides the leading coverage of Native American art. Our writers are art historians, Native artists, curators, and others with a long-standing, intimate connection to the Native art world.

Native artists have a vital contribution to make to the global art world, and First American Art Magazine conveys their messages—from tribal communities in the Americas to international art fairs.

Launched in 2013, FAAM is American Indian–owned. The magazine grew out of an organic need for serious dialogue about the content and direction of Indigenous art that is readily understood by the public, artists, and collectors.

FAAM is the only magazine that consistently covers Native conceptual art and new media as well as historical and precontact artwork. Understanding that some items are too sacred to be considered “art,” we honor community protocols.

We bypass stereotypes and marketing hype to reach the core of the conversation.

Through quality printing and timeless content, our issues are read and reread. FAAM is found in dozens of libraries on three continents. Articles from FAAM are also used in college classrooms to reach the next generation of Native artists, art collectors, and professionals.

First American Art Magazine elevates the profile of Native art in the international art world.
